

sterling Russians, who, in the defence of the liberty of all Europe, have been reduced to the most severe discipline by the merciless ravages of the most iron-hearted invader and tyrant which ever was in human shape."

New-Britain, Conn., March 17, 1878.

THE STARVING CHINESE.

SIR: Enclosed please find $5 for the sufferers by the famine in China. Your article in THE DAILY TRIBUNE of the 15th had ought to be read by every lover of humanity in all our land. Your closing words are timely, and express my views fully; hence I send my small contribution, which I wish to use as your better judgment may dictate. I cannot close without quoting those impressive words of yours, hoping to stir up others to act in helping the suffering sufferers in China. "The time has come to teach Christianity as Christ taught it." This is the season when elections are taken up in our churches for foreign missions. We would suggest that one star should represent the starving Chinese, and that it would be fitting when we present our tithes or missionary in the future could ever equal." Will not the Master say to us, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto me, unto these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

*Chas. N. Brown.
Sag Harbor, L. I., March 18, 1878.*

[We forward the above to Mr. A. A. Low, 31 Brush-st., New-York City, to whom we recommend that all similar contributions be sent.—Ed.]

"THE SAME OLD DRUNK."

To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: I heartily indorse the noble and eloquent language in which you condemn the evil merited terms the insulting conduct of the mud-will of a Northern reporter who has dared to exaggerate, in the most unmerciful manner, the number of occasions on which the Hon. Beverly Douglass, of Virginia, was seen on the floor of Congress (standing I mean), in what the correspondent is sarcastically and irreverently pleased to call "a state of intoxication." All the facts are to the credit of the thousands of other chivalrous sons, I beg to thank you, and I beg further to assure you that they are perfectly correct in your facts. Douglass was not drunk several times, but I believe it is true, in that state on several different days, but I have no evidence that it was "the same old drunk."

A SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN.

New-York, March 20, 1878.

WINDS IN HIGH LATITUDES.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: I see it reported that Mr. DeForville proposes to use small balloons for the study of the air-currents of the Arctic Regions. I would suggest that Captain Howgate should have attached to those balloons a small strip of light metal, with a record of the time and place of the release of the balloon, and a sponge filled with some material which would absorb moisture enough, when above the cold, dry Arctic current, to bring it to the earth, and with it record its course and altitude. This would add greatly to the world's knowledge of the winds and air-currents in high latitudes.

Arch. F. Law.
Pittston, Penn., March 20, 1878.

WHO MADE THE FIRST DAGUERREOTYPE?

To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: In your issues of March 5th and 7th the question, who made the first daguerreotype seems to be in doubt. Below I give you an establishment date: In the year 1839, a daguerreotype was taken by E. S. Pease, of Buffalo, of De Witt C. Wood's old hardware store, corner of Main and Swan-sts. It was taken in the rear of the dry goods store, occupied by the subscriber, at No. 218 Main-st. The picture was given to me by several others, and was considered unusual at that time.

Thus P. Sears.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 20, 1878.

PLUM PUDDING AS AN EXPORT.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: In one of last week's TRIBUNES an editorial states that, possibly, in a distant future, Jonathan might send to John Bull canned plum pudding. A fire in Dover, Eng., have been canning for the last year pudding superior to any the winter ever ate in England. As it has reached Syracuse, probably London will have an early day.

W. S. A.
Syracuse, N. Y., March 18, 1878.

MEN-SERVANTS IN THE STEWART HOME.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: The article in THE TRIBUNE describing Stewart's Hotel for Women, states that a corps of fifty men-servants is engaged for the dining-room. It seems a strange inconsistency to employ men-servants in a house intended exclusively for women. Are there not in the City of New-York fifty women capable of performing the duties of table-waiters in Stewart's Hotel for Women?

M. J. C.

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 16, 1878.

BREAD FOR CHINA.

SIR: What is to be done for the starving millions of China? Are we to excuse ourselves by saying, "They are so far away?" "Who is my neighbor?" A few ship loads of provisions, in this hour of need, might do more to open the way for Christianity than long years of preaching.

Wheat.

New-York, March 18, 1878.

WHY A SWINDLER FAILED.

PRINCESS SUVAROFF'S TEXAS PROJECT.
EFFECT OF C. G. BRADSHAW'S GLOWING REPRESENTATIONS—HOW HIS ATTEMPTED FRAUD WAS DISCOVERED—ABOUT $160,000 SAVED FOR ITS OWNER.

No trace has yet been found by the police of the adventurer who made the attempt to blackmail the Princess Suvaroff during her stay in the Windsor Hotel in this city. The departure of the Princess and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, put an end to active search on the part of the detectives.

It is now stated that the Princess, during her visit here, was annoyed by the attempt of another person to swindle her out of a large sum of money. Among the guests at the Windsor Hotel, with whom the Princess became acquainted, was a man named C. G. Bradshaw. He came to the hotel on January 17, and registered as from Bloomington, Ill. In conversations with the Princess and her cousin, he stated that he had spent the greater portion of his life in Texas, where he said he owned 80,000 acres of land and about 34,000 head of cattle. Count Kadoyvrat was at that time thinking of buying some land in Texas, for the purpose of raising cattle and shipping beef to Europe, and he became much interested in the statements made by Bradshaw. The Princess also listened to descriptions of Texas life and society with great interest. Bradshaw, who is said to be a fluent speaker, portrayed in most glowing colors the beauties of life in Texas, and the opportunities for accumulating wealth there, until his listeners gave him to understand that they wished to invest money in Texas lands. He said that he was already as rich as he desired to be, and would gladly sell his land and cattle. He described his property as being situated in Comanche County, about eighty miles from Fort Worth. He would take for this property, he said, $100,000. He would accompany the Princess and Count to Texas to prove his sole right to the property, and have the transfer made in legal form. President Hayes had lately appointed him to the command of 5,000 special police to guard the frontier against the raids of Mexican cattle thieves, and he would therefore have to make the journey in a few weeks.

The Princess and her cousin regarded his proposals with favor, and made plans for their intended project. Bradshaw remained at the hotel and talked in earnest about his plan with the Princess and her cousin, and they soon realized that he indeed had the means to the ways of society, and he asked the most absurd questions as to the rules of etiquette. One day he announced his determination to go to Europe, and the Princess said, "We will have to leave you."

Bradshaw, however, had written to the Consul of Police at Bloomington, Ill., and was sent back that C. G. Bradshaw was a lawyer of that place, and was supposed to be in the service of the State of Illinois. In answer to another dispatch, the Consul of Police at the Texan Consulate, and Count Kadoyvrat recognized at once. The letter stated that Bradshaw had been absent from Bloomington several weeks, and that he was then at Washington, defending himself against charges of having committed a robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, were in the office of the man and his son, and the man's wife, Mrs. Bradshaw, and they sought the aid of Police's Private Detective Agency in endeavoring to find out something of his history. Superintendent J. M. Fisher sent a telegram to agents in Louisville and St. Louis, asking that he be sent to the law known in those places. He then sent a telegram to the Consul of Police at Bloomington, Ill., and was sent back that C. G. Bradshaw was a lawyer of that place, and was supposed to be in the service of the State of Illinois.

In answer to another dispatch, the Consul of Police at the Texan Consulate, and Count Kadoyvrat recognized at once. The letter stated that Bradshaw had been absent from Bloomington several weeks, and that he was then at Washington, defending himself against charges of having committed a robbery.

"How did the grand case go today? When do you return home to Bloomington? Please answer."

Somewhat to her surprise, Bradshaw sent a reply saying that a cousin named "Cormick" Bradshaw, living in Galveston, and received a check for $1,000, and to bring it to him when he would be in St. Louis, to provide for the journey to Europe. The efficiency of Bradshaw's mind and Mr. Fisher's was such, however, that the man had to leave his cousin in Galveston, and the man had to leave his cousin in Galveston.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the Princess, Suvaroff, and her cousin, Count Kadoyvrat, went to the office of the Texan Consulate, and the man was sent back that he had been arrested by the police in Galveston, and was to be tried for robbery.

After his departure, the